

DZI BEADS

Precious Protectors from the Land of Snow

The Dzi bead is both mysterious and magical, and its genesis shrouded in legend. There are many inspiring tales about its origins and its talismanic power to bring good fortune.

Dzi brings you luck and prosperity

From the land of snow and mountains, comes the magical, mysterious and precious Dzi. A treasure that is believed to protect the wearer from misfortune and harm, and bring good fortune and prosperity. For a long time, it remained undiscovered to the rest of the world except to those in its immediate vicinity like Kathmandu, Bhutan and Sikkim. Centuries later, visitors to these places brought back stories of its potency and people from the world outside began to discover these fascinating gemstones.

Pure Dzi beads are the most desirable. To qualify as pure, a bead must be genuine agate or chalcedony. A delineated pattern must be clearly discernible and it has to be symmetrical in shape and possess strong colour. The best ones are plump, round or tubular in shape. Tibetans revere the Dzi as "jewels discarded by the gods," hence real Dzi is never perfect. They are always blemished in some way.

Differentiation in their value comes from etched symbols – "eyes", stars, circles, squares, shapes of birds, trees and lotuses. Each of these symbols has powerful meanings – that of divine protection, prosperity from heaven, double longevity and victory over foes.

So many ways to wear your Dzi!

Dzi can be worn as bracelets or necklaces. Many youngsters wear a Dzi on a short string choker. For convenience, they are best worn as bracelets strung with crystals or semi-precious beads. You should wear your Dzi on the underside of your wrist, lightly touching your pulse point. This allows the body Chi to connect directly with the Chi of the Dzi, further expanding its potency. If you wear your Dzi on a necklace, it is best to keep it short so that your Dzi touches your throat chakra.

Wearing the Dzi talisman can be a strange new experience for many. Its energy is powerful and sometimes when you first put it on, you may develop a headache. This could mean that the Dzi energy may be too strong for you or it may be detecting something negative that's about to happen. Some people find this happens when they try to wear several Dzi all at the same time.

A great way to get used to this new experience is to wear them only during the day and not sleep with it on for a couple of weeks. Your body may have to attune itself to some very powerful Chi and this may take up to a week or two. If you wish to wear multiple Dzi, add them gradually. Once your body adjusts, the Dzi will help you realize your dreams and desires – and protect you in many ways.
